Historic Mass at St. Andrew's

Members of the Music Department, in co-operation with His Excellency, the Most Reverend Remi De Roo will provide the music for a Pontifical High Mass according to the Sixteenth Century tradition at St. Andrew's Cathedral, February 18.

The Mass will be celebrated by Bishop De Roo at 7:30 p.m.

The University Chamber Singers, directed by George Corwin, will sing to the accompaniment of music provided by members of the Collegium Musicum, directed by Christine K. Mather. Sixteenth Century wind instruments—the shawm, dulcian, krummhorns, recorders and sackbut will be featured.

Dr. Mather stressed that it is not a concert, but a Mass, and that the singers and musicians will be in the choir loft and not visible to the congregation.

The polyphonic setting of the Ordinary of the Mass will be the Missa de Beata Virgine by Josquin des Prez, considered to be one of his most beautiful works.

The Proper of the Mass will be the Gregorian Chant setting of the Mass for Corpus Christi and will be sung by the men of the Chamber Singers, with Dr. Corwin as cantor.

There will be no distribution of communion.

The Music Department will hold rehearsals at the Cathedral, located at View and Blanshard at 2:45 p.m. this afternoon.

About Inflation

"What About Inflation?" is the title of a series of four lectures to be given by members of the Department of Economics, February 20, February 27, March 6 and March 13, as part of the spring programme of the Division of Continuing Education.

The first two lectures by Dr. R.V. Churneff will give a background of previous Canadian and foreign inflationary experiences. They will outline the fundamental causes and processes that generate inflation, as well as isolate the consequences of inflation for the distribution of real income and wealth.

In addition, these two lectures will consider the role of monetary and fiscal policies as possible contributors to the current inflation, and examine the costs to society of using conventional measures to correct inflation.

The third lecture, by Dr. W.D. Walsh, will include an expanded view of the inflation-unemployment trade-off relationship, and explore the question of monopoly power in the markets for products and labour services—another contributor to inflation in Canada. The potential cost to society of wage-price controls will also be discussed by Dr. Walsh.

The final lecture will be given by Joseph Schaafsma, former research economist with the Prices and Incomes Commission in Ottawa. He will discuss the development, responsibilities, conclusions and recommendations of the Commission.

The lectures will be held from 7:30 to 9:30 each evening in Clearihue 303. Fee for the four sessions is $6.

Phoenix Play a Canadian First

The third of five Phoenix Festival programmes opens tonight with two plays, and music by the Faculty Woodwind Quintet.

Tonight's programme follows the pattern set by the two previous weekend events which drew packed houses.

"We feel we have something really exciting going on at the Phoenix with Visual Arts, Music and Theatre Departments working together on the festival", said Mary Jane Scott, Theatre Publicity Director, after the first two highly successful programmes.

So far the informal entertainments have been well received by the public, and newspaper reviews have been enthusiastic. A wide variety of music is being performed by faculty and students of the Music Department at the invitation of Theatre Director, John Krich, and students from Visual Arts have arranged displays of graphics and ceramics in the Phoenix foyer.

Tonight's plays, both student productions, are Night With Guests, directed by Richard Epp; and Marriage Proposal, directed by Mardi Davis. The programme will be repeated Saturday and Sunday.

Next week, Terry Barber will direct the first production of a new Canadian play, Thing in Black by Wilfred Watson, Professor of English at the University of Alberta. This is not a serious drama, but rather a melodramatic farce parodying a century of playwriting styles, poking fun at "the well-made plays" of the 19th Century, the theatre of the absurd, and even George Bernard Shaw.

A second play, Madman on the Roof, will be directed by Blair Shakell. On the evening of February 24, the popular UVic Jazz Band will perform and Chris Butterfield's group will play under a new name, "Harry the Gnat".

The final programme, A Weekend of Poetry and Music, will be presented March 2, 3 and 4.

Organized by the English Department under the direction of Russell Keziere, it includes readings by Anthony Jenkins, Robin Skelton, Robert Sward and David Thatcher. Francine Wurster will read a dramatic scene from Sophocles' Electra at the Friday and Saturday performances only.

Also featured will be the UVic percussion ensemble, the brass band and other groups with music including compositions by students.

All performances begin at 8 p.m. Tickets are $1 at the Phoenix Theatre box office, open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily, or telephone 477-4821.

"Tree Toad" is part of a display of graphics and ceramics currently on view in the foyer of the Phoenix Theatre. They are the work of visual arts students, members of "The Mighty Little Tunnel Company," and are for sale.

Exercising at lunch hour is Winifred Ruth, Co-ordinator of physical fitness programme for women. Workouts are held Tuesday and Friday, 12:30 - 1:30 p.m. in P Hut.

Folk Dancing and Gymnastics in P Hut

Each Tuesday and Friday at lunch hour, a small group of women meets in "P" hut for keep fit classes. The highly informal classes include a variety of activities from gymnastics to Israeli folk dances.

Group leader Winifred Ruth, trained in modern dance, explains that classes are open to all women on campus, and in fact they can bring a guest if they like.

It's all very informal, and no one needs to feel any pressure to keep up, or to exercise beyond their ability. It's a question of getting into condition gradually," Mrs. Ruth says.

Other members of the class are Krystyna Rochfort and Irene Garnham, who agree it takes a lot of will power to spend a lunch hour exercising instead of eating. They are two of the few with will power, but they say, "it's well worth it. You feel so much better, even if you don't have time for lunch."

The classes started with nearly 60, but quickly dropped to less than a dozen, so there is plenty of room in the big studio equipped with ballet barre and mirror.

One of the things the regulars appreciate is the variety introduced into the workouts by Mrs. Ruth.

"We quite often do exercises especially for those usual problem areas—you know how it is with people who sit at desks all day," they explain.

Some of the exercises may look hard, but Mrs. Ruth says no one has to work beyond capacity. Anyone interested in joining the group is guaranteed a gentle initiation at the early classes, and for weight watchers there are occasional discussions about diet.

Defence Policy Lecture Series

Dr. R.H. Roy, Military History, has been invited to take part in a special lecture series at the National War Museum, Ottawa, later this month. The series will examine Canadian Defence policy.

Subject of Dr. Roy's lecture will be "The Generals' Revolt", a term used to describe the reaction of senior officers in Canada to the conscription issue of 1944.

Material for the lecture, Dr. Roy says, will come mostly from a chapter of his book Pearkes, V.C. which is expected to be completed this year.

When completed, the book will be the official biography of the former Lieutenant Governor of B.C., Major General G.R. Pearkes who will be 85 years old February 26.

General Pearkes was General Officer Commanding in Chief, Pacific Command at the time of the conscription crisis.
